WMF MISSIONARY SPOTLIGHT

Nate & Rhoda Jore & family Missionaries to Uganda

Over time and with dedication, the Jore family has built close relationships with the Ugandan people in their community, with their farm being a tool for opening those opportunities. Visiting with neighbors and investing in the everyday activities of the community is a large part of the Jores' ministry. One aspect of Ugandan culture that they appreciate is the hospitality that dictates daily life, witnessing in particular the deep regard and respect the people of Uganda have for the elderly. Although some in their community are biblically illiterate, the Jores have seen a desire in the hearts of many to know God and His Word. Nate has given special discipleship training to a few young men during the lunch hour every weekday. Nate states, "I have thoroughly enjoyed reading and studying the Scriptures with them and reliving it through their first-time experiences."

Currently, the Jores have focused on developing church gatherings in their local area. The young men who Nate has been disciplining are being prepared to lead church gatherings. For example, when they were starting to plant a church, they were going through the book of Acts. "We were reading through the book of Acts," Nate shared, "seeing how the early church was spreading and functioning. It was really good to see them learning the process and putting it into practice immediately."

With many in the community studying the word of God for themselves, the Jores have seen ideas about how they originally thought about church change. Church in Uganda, like anywhere, can become like a show or a business in some cases. Whatever the man in charge says becomes the gospel, meaning whatever he says is not questioned. He is no longer held accountable by anyone, leading to many instances of corruption and prosperity gospel. "With guys we have been working with and families we have been working with, we have encouraged them to see church as the body," Rhoda shared, "It's been a slow shift, and it's really been beautiful to see and to see their excitement." Nate and Rhoda desire to witness church gatherings centered on the truths of Scripture and church leaders who would be trained to establish their churches in the Word of God.

Prayer requests:

- Wisdom in training and raising their children
- For protection against attacks from the evil one
- For each of their personal, daily walks with the Lord
- For the relationship with the soccer boys and the Bible study with them
- For the church start in the village of Nabukosi
- Vision for making disciples in the village
- For good health and safety
